DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

1. Claim 59 is objected to because of the following informalities:

As per claim 59, line 2, "idtification" appears to be a typographical error. The examiner suggests replacing "idtification" to --identification--.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. Claims 59-67 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

As per claim 59, line 7, the first occurrence of "transponder" is referred back to the previously recited "hand-held transponder" on line 2. It is unclear how the transponder recited on line 7 now recites the "transponder comprises a handheld transponder".

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 59-67 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Randelman et al (US Patent No. 5,072,380).

As per claims 59, 65 Randelman et al disclose a system and method for authorizing a dispensing transaction comprising the steps of:

Determining whether an electronic card having an emitter containing customer identification is within a range of a dispenser, the dispenser comprises a fuel dispenser requiring activation by the customer to initiate a transaction and including a reader associated therewith for emitting radio frequency signals within the dispenser range, and for receiving customer identification data from the card responsive to the emitted radio frequency signals received by the transponder, wherein the card contains customer identification data;

Determining whether the dispenser has been activated by the customer following the determination that the emitter is within the dispenser range; and

Upon activation of the dispenser following the determination that the card with the emitter is within the dispenser range, associating the customer identification data received by the reader with a transaction at the activated dispenser, whereupon the transaction at the activated dispenser is permitted and charged to the customer according to the customer identification data, wherein the reader is provided with a first antenna that is adapted to emit and receive radio frequency signals within the dispenser range, wherein the receipt of radio frequency signals includes receiving customer identification data.

Applicant is directed to column 3, line 34 to column 4, line 59.

The only difference between the claimed invention and the system of Randleman is that the system of Randleman uses an emitter card whereas the claimed invention is claiming a portable handheld transponder. As per this minor obvious difference, it is noted that the claimed transponder performs similar functions as the emitter card of Randleman. Thus, there exists only a change in label which does not attribute to any patentable differences.

Claims 60-64 are directed to the billing of the customer's account upon a valid authorization of the customer's account which must contain sufficient funds to enable a current transaction (such as dispensing fuel) to take place. As per these limitations, the examiner asserts that card authorization is well known in the art and usually involves a card issuer or bank authorizes a payment for a particular transaction if there exists a sufficient fund in the cardholder's or customer's account. Randelman et al teach cross-checking or validating credit of a customer's account before allowing a transaction to take place. Thus, performing the functions of claimed 60-64 in Randleman et al would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to do for payment processing purposes.

As per claim 66, Randleman et al disclose querying if a vehicle approaches a fuel dispenser when the vehicle having the card with the emitter is in the vicinity of a gas station. See column 3, lines 56-67.

As per claim 67, see column 3, line 59 to column 4, line 19 of Randleman et al.
